In his new book, Fourteen People Who Dared to Change Our World, author John Doe profiles 14 such individuals. These are people from all walks of life who have made significant contributions to science, technology, the arts, and social justice.

Some of the people featured in the book are well-known figures, such as Albert Einstein, Marie Curie, and Martin Luther King, Jr. But others are lesser-known individuals whose stories are just as inspiring.

For example, there's the story of Henrietta Lacks, a young African-American woman whose cells were taken without her knowledge or consent and used to create the HeLa cell line, which has been used in countless medical research studies.

Or there's the story of Malala Yousafzai, a Pakistani schoolgirl who was shot in the head by the Taliban for speaking out in favor of education for girls.

These are just a few of the many inspiring stories that you'll find in Fourteen People Who Dared to Change Our World. These are stories that will remind you that anything is possible if you have the courage to dream big and never give up on your dreams.

A Closer Look at Some of the People Featured in *Fourteen People Who Dared to Change Our World

- Albert Einstein: One of the greatest physicists of all time, Einstein revolutionized our understanding of the universe with his theories of relativity.
- Marie Curie: A pioneering scientist, Curie was the first woman to win a Nobel Prize and the only person to win Nobel Prizes in two different scientific fields (physics and chemistry).
- Martin Luther King, Jr.: A civil rights leader, King led the Montgomery bus boycott and other nonviolent protests that helped to end segregation in the United States.
- Henrietta Lacks: A young African-American woman whose cells were taken without her knowledge or consent and used to create the HeLa cell line, which has been used in countless medical research studies.

- Malala Yousafzai: A Pakistani schoolgirl who was shot in the head by the Taliban for speaking out in favor of education for girls.
