The Roots of Gandhi's Nonviolence

Gandhi was born in 1869 in Porbandar, India. His father was a chief minister and his mother was a devout Hindu. Gandhi was raised in a deeply religious household and was taught the importance of truth, compassion, and nonviolence.

Gandhi's first exposure to nonviolence came during his time in South Africa. In 1893, he went to South Africa to work as a lawyer. There, he was confronted with the racism and discrimination that was rampant in the country. Gandhi was appalled by the treatment of Indians in South Africa and he began to develop his own philosophy of nonviolent resistance.

The Principles of Satyagraha

Satyagraha is a Sanskrit word that means "truth-force." It is a philosophy of nonviolent resistance that is based on the belief that truth and love will ultimately prevail over violence and hatred.

The key principles of satyagraha are:

- Truth: Satyagrahis believe that truth is the highest virtue and that it should always be pursued, even in the face of adversity.
- Nonviolence: Satyagrahis believe that violence is never justified and that it only leads to more violence.
- Love: Satyagrahis believe that love is the most powerful force in the world and that it can overcome even the most entrenched hatred.
- Forgiveness: Satyagrahis believe that forgiveness is essential for healing and reconciliation.
- Self-sacrifice: Satyagrahis are willing to sacrifice their own lives for the cause of truth and nonviolence.
