Robbie's parents were both musicians, and music was always a central part of his life. He grew up listening to his parents sing and play, and he began playing guitar and writing songs at a young age. When his parents passed away, Robbie found solace in music. He wrote songs about his memories of them, and about the pain of losing them.

The songs on In Song For Ma and Pa are both heartbreaking and hopeful. Robbie sings about the loneliness and sadness of losing his parents, but he also celebrates their lives and the love they shared. The album is a testament to the power of music to heal and to connect us with those we have lost.

In addition to the songs about his parents, In Song For Ma and Pa also features several other moving tracks. "The Old Man" is a tribute to Robbie's grandfather, and "The River" is a beautiful meditation on life and death. The album closes with the title track, a song that is both a lament and a celebration of Robbie's parents' lives.

In Song For Ma and Pa is a must-listen for anyone who has experienced the loss of a loved one. Robbie Ray Ray's songs are honest, raw, and deeply moving. They offer comfort and hope to those who are grieving, and they remind us of the power of music to connect us with those we have lost.
