

Vietnam Now: A Reporter Returns

By David Halberstam

In 1962, David Halberstam was a young reporter for the New York Times when he was sent to cover the Vietnam War. He spent the next four years reporting on the conflict, and his dispatches from the front lines helped to shape American public opinion about the war.

In 1998, Halberstam returned to Vietnam to see how the country had changed since the war. He found a country that was still struggling to come to terms with its past, but that was also making great strides in terms of economic development. He met with Vietnamese people from all walks of life, and he came to understand the complex challenges that the country faced.
